Cain's Not Able

Have you ever noticed how hard some faith steps can be? There are times, as I attempt to take a step of faith, that it's like trying to step through quicksand. I feel the next step might be the step where I sink. Believing God is the best and most rewarding step one can make, but it doesn't happen easily. There are many people who seeking for the truth, however when it comes to taking that step into belief, they just can't quite move. They know God exists, yet they simply are paralysed by fear, pride, or some deception of the enemy. My heart breaks for them. Thinking about this has challenged me to be praying more for the lost and asking God to help me understand what is the complexity that hinders them from believing.

I can't say that I understand a person's reasoning for holding back from following Jesus. Yet, what is a bit baffling to me is how individuals who grow up in the same home, same environment and community have vastly different responses to Christ. I know people who grew up in the same family yet have very different walks with God. Yes, I know that our faith journey has a personal component to it and God walks with each person differently. But I am talking about people who grew up with the exact same lifestyle, culture, church experience, home life, and family as others. Yet, I am not sure they really have a faith in Christ. Please know I am not trying to judge their journey; I am simply using it as an example to how faith can be challenging for us all.

We see this played out very early in the bible. In Genesis 4 we are introduced to the children of Adam and Eve, well the first two kids anyway. Cain, the first born was a farmer and Abel (#2) was a shepherd. We pick up the moment they are taking an offering to Jehovah. This seems right, however there is a challenging component as we continue reading the story. Cain isn't really sold on the idea of offering God his produce. Cain, for some reason, was not able to honour God and worship him through an offering. He was not willing to surrender completely to the faith journey.

Abel, a much different story. He came ready to bless God with his offering. He brought the best of what he had to offer to the one who provided for him. He saw the opportunity to worship God as a moment to express his gratitude and thanksgiving.

What was the contrast between them? What caused Abel to be all in and Cain to be half-hearted? What caused Abel to bring his best and Cain to offer mediocrity. As I examine this story and the component of faith, there can really be only one conclusion. It is trust. Abel trusted God enough to give of his best. Cain was not trusting of God and was holding back. Why did Cain not have belief in God? I am not certain. Could it be fear, pride, or confusion about why God would ask him to give of his produce? It certainly could be, and it could be many other things. This is one of the reasons faith is so difficult. To believe God takes an all in approach. We put everything into the trust basket. On the other hand, to doubt God is everything except complete trust. It only takes one fear, one doubt, one uncertainty and we could walk away from God.

This is why trust is the key. If I trust God then I will be obedient and faithful. If I don't trust God then I will have a struggle with surrendering to him. Trust is what will give us the courage to step into faith. Trust helps us to believe that God is faithful and will come through. Trust is the motivation of our faith.

I am still not sure how two individuals can have the same background yet come to completely different conclusions about God. When it boils down to it we just have to say, "Cain was not Able" He was not willing to trust God, and this brought a defining line between his faith and Abel, his brothers, faith.

Faith is incredibly challenging at times; I am praying for you as you continue to live by faith. As I mentioned last week, relationship is what will help us persevere, relationship is what builds trust. Therefore: Be Confident (in him) Be close (to him) Be Constant (with Him) Be Considerate (For Him) (Hebrews 10:19-25). I hope we can learn to be more like Abel and not Cain. Why? Because Cain was not able.

See ya Sunday,

Church History with Ferdinand

Did you know... that the Elizabeth Church of Christ started in a one-car garage at the back of the Elizabeth South Shops and these shops are now the Hope Church on Goodman Road. It started as a Sunday School held by Pat Russell. The children sat on seats made out of crates with planks of wood on them!
